P.C.

Heard all parties. This is an application for condonation of delay of 142 days in filing appeal from order. The reason given is that one party filed review application against the impugned order and the petitioner waited for the disposal of the review application. He contended that he was wrongly advised that the period of limitation would stand extended when the review application was pending. Later on he was advised that he should file an appeal against the order rejecting the review application. The Advocate from Panaji then advised to challenge the original order. Since no reply has been filed by the respondent, in my view, for the reasons mentioned in the application, application is allowed. Office to number the main appeal and list the same for admission on 18th October, 2007. The connected matters which are already tagged also to be shown on board. Application disposed off.
